Im Debattierclub n° 137.3

Creative way of working

1.

A. Soojung-Kim Pang. Mach mal halblang.
Charles Darwin und Thomas Mann verbindet nicht nur ihre Genialität, sondern auch eine Überzeugung: Vier Stunden Arbeit am Tag reichen. Der Rest ist Muße.
Sächsische Zeitung 13./14. Mai 2017

2.

M. Freeman. Mysterien des Weltalls.
Gibt es einen Schöpfer? Doku Folge 8
ServusTV Deutschland
22.05.2017, 22:40 - 23:30

3.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Antony_Garrett_Lisi
“Surfing and snowboarding are what I do for fun – to get out and play in nature. We live in a beautiful universe, and I wish to enjoy it and understand it as best I can. And I try to live a balanced life. Surfing is simply the most fun I know how to have on this planet. And physics, and science in general, is the best way of understanding how everything works. So this is what I spend my time doing. I do what I love, and follow my interests. Shouldn't everyone?[39]“
„The physical requirements for conducting scholarly research have changed dramatically with the rise of the internet. It is now viable for researchers with laptop computers to work autonomously – with access to current articles and communication channels on par with the resources available at large universities. These new circumstances motivate the creation of a new kind of research enterprise: a Science Hostel. By providing places to live and work with other researchers, in beautiful locations, a Science Hostel could increase creative productivity and overall quality of life for scholars in the internet age.[49]“

4.

M. Großekathöfer. Die Schule der Drachen.
„Denn nur durch Disziplin kann man zum Drachen werden, mutig, stark und weise.“
“Only by discipline, you can become a dragon, brave, strong, and sapient.”
“一个人只有严于律己，才能成为一条龙，勇敢、强大、充满智慧。”
http://www.spiegel.de/spiegel/print/d-50343995.html (2007)
Li Xianshuang Gymnastics School in Xiantao.
Safety net for young gymnasts.
http://english.sina.com/sports/p/2012/0808/494603.html

5.

See also Deb 27.

Continue this collection of statements. What is your opinion and experience?

23.05.2017 EPSnurt.